TEUTONS CARRY TERRORS OF WAR INTO ROMANIA

William Bayard Hale Describes Destruction of Town of Predeal, and Repeated Attempts to Take Saily Saissel End in Failure, Gain South of Somme.

By WILLIAM BAYARD HALE, Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

Merito, via Havilla wireless Oct 21.—Accounts are now reaching the capital describing the progress of the central border armies into Rumania through the Tereze pass, rainclouds on October 14 to the destruction of Predeal, which is well within Rumanian territory.

It was two weeks ago that I was allowed to pass through the gateway under guard, in a twisted and contrived compartment, en route between Kronstadt and Blasi, a summer residence of the Rumanian king.

The curtain was insufficient, however, to prevent a view, and I am able to describe the scene as it unfolded, which ranged along this gorge last

Descriptions arriving here from participants tell of valleys filled in by the heavy level of evidence of the hasty retreat of the Rumanians, roads and bridges crisscrossed with debris and ammunition, dead horses and mules, and the bodies of the men who had been killed or wounded. The artillery had been taken to the rear, and the Rumanians were now in the process of reorganizing their lines.

The preliminary attacks on October 14 and 15 were in vain, and the Rumanians were forced to retreat. The German army, which was now in the process of reorganizing its lines, was now in the process of reorganizing its lines.

Belligerents Are Deadlocked in West, so Sharp Declares

New York, Oct. 21.—BELLER, calling on the American liner St. Paul today to resume his duties as Ambassador to France, William Sharp reiterated the opinion expressed by him at the Boston City Club on Friday, that the military situation on the western front in Europe is deadlocked.

The Germans will never get to Paris. But when I say that I speak only what everyone in Paris knows.

"Despite the most desperate assaults by the allies during the last few months, the western line has scarcely changed. In a few spots there have been gains, I have been along the front and I know that the deadlock is becoming fixed each day."

A copy of Carranza's decree abrogating all personal guarantees was discovered by the Americans and laid before their Mexican colleagues. The Americans asked the Mexicans the following questions:

"Does not this decree open the way for the most merciless and disgusting?"

"Will not the innocent, as well as the guilty, be made to pay the penalty if the rights of trial and appeal are abolished?"

"Although the excuse is made that the decree is simply to make possible the swift execution of justice in crimes against the state, are not virtually all offenses included in its provisions?"

"Therefore, does not this decree wipe out the constitutional rights of everybody whom the government may regard with disfavour?"

The decree declares that brigandage has developed in the country. Armed bands called "Carranza's army" are charged with looting and pillaging warehouses of trunks, clothing, stationery and other goods, and the inhabitants of the country districts are insecure and driving the inhabitants to the larger centres of population for protection.

On Friday morning, Villa, with only 800 men, made a surprise attack on the city of Mexico. The attack was repulsed, but the city was left in a state of alarm.

The Italian front was quiet during the week, save for the usual small skirmishes for position here and there. In those skirmishes the advantage lay with the allies, each side occasionally registering a success.

As the week ended Russia was predicting a coming Austrian offensive against her lines.

A Russian bulletin as the week ended revealed the fact that the Russian forces in the Caucasus have been slowly forced back during the past month from the advanced lines they occupied in September.

SMOORS DESERT FIVE STEAMERS

MUNITION SHIP OFF FOR EUROPE

Ships employed on munition ships are demanding substantial money for the bonuses paid on each ship because of the recent activities of German submarines on the side of the Allies.

Increases have been granted on many ships, but not sufficiently large to induce several extra voyages to take a chance.

The sailing of the American Hawaiian liner, the S.S. Mauretania, scheduled for yesterday morning, was delayed by discussions among the crew. The vessel was not to sail until the morning of the 23rd.

The steamer of the Colombian, after ship, the Kaituma, was granted an increase of 30 per cent, when she sailed from Boston last week, and several of the crew quit because of the increase.

The men on the Colombian also demanded a 30 per cent increase.

Chas Increases In Greece

By International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 21.—Chas continues in the Balkan kingdom.

The interest of all Europe is centered on the Greek King Constantine, or what is left of it. One dispatch by way of Rome told that Constantine is backed by $2,000,000.

If he plans a "coup d'etat," a sudden attempt to shake off the distribution enforced upon him by the Allies for precautionary reasons, he will have to do so at once, otherwise here and there even they look for only one outcome—his overthrow.

"Instead of quieting the disorder to direct action for the Greek king, the Greek government that if the disaffected troops will be notified. The entire further demanded that the orders are not promptly issued more troops army," he said, "and that to a peace footing, and that these orders be executed."

Measures, Chas and Arrington will be sent to the Greek capital, Athens, to recruit volunteers in army.

24 PARALYSIS CASES IN DAY IN BOSTON AND 6 IN WYOMING

Health Authorities Believe Epidemic Will Early Begin to Show Decrease.

Twenty-four cases of infantile paralysis were reported by the State Department of Health yesterday, a number considerably in excess of Friday's total, though somewhat less than the average for the early part of last week.

Sight of the cases are in Boston and six in Wyoming, where the epidemic has reached a stage that has caused considerable alarm. There was one death in Wyoming, that of Ella Wood, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wood of Newbury avenue.

Three children in one family were found to be suffering from the disease in Quincy, where it is the second triple case to be reported in the State, the first having been discovered in Waltham a few days ago. William, Walter and Evelyn Erickson of No. 65 Verchard street are the stricken Quinners. The case of Walter Erickson is classified as a suspicious case.

Yesterday's cases bring the total for the first 31 days in the month up to 242, as compared with 225 for the entire month of September.

STATE CASES LAST. There have been 1,537 cases reported in the State since the first of the year. The previous high total was reached in 1915, when 222 cases were reported in the entire year.

In an effort to prevent the spread of the disease, Congressman George Holden Tinkham has written to the Boston & Maine officials protesting against the railroad. The case of Walter Erickson is classified as a suspicious case.

Infantile paralysis has proved so resistant to all efforts under fifteen entering the country. Congressional action took this action at the request of Dr. Ralph H. Young of Highland street, Roxbury, who stated that one of his patients, a child of three years, had been turned back at the border because of the lack of health certificates, and was compelled to return to Boston with the child to obtain the necessary documents.

In spite of the fact that a large number of cases were reported in Boston during the week, the Boston Health Department believes that the epidemic has reached its height and is now decreasing.

CORPS CITY RESUME. Infantile paralysis is an expensive disease to fight, as the city records show. Mayor Currier has ordered that the effort of the city in fighting the disease has cost $125,000 that would not otherwise have been expended.

The Mayor has authorized the purchase of a large number of massage machines and other electrical appliances, that are vital in treating the patient after the more serious phases of the disease have passed.

Since the epidemic gained a foothold in the city, there have been 333 Boston victims, in addition to 123 patients who were brought to the city for treatment. The deaths have numbered 164.

It is believed the worst is over," said Health Commissioner Dr. Francis X. Mahoney last night. "The last three or four weeks have shown a steadily decreasing number of cases."

These views are shared by Deputy Health Commissioner Sherr.

WALKING, SAYS RITCHIE, WILL BENEFIT PEOPLE

John Ritchie, Jr., Boston authority on walking, past president of the famous Appalachian Club, and for years head of its excursion committee, has written for the AMERICAN an article on walking and its value to the walker. The article follows:

By JOHN RITCHIE, JR.

Walking is an exercise that is enjoyed by all classes of people, and for its skill, it is one of the most valuable of all. It is a simple, yet a most effective, means of keeping the body in good condition, and it is a most effective means of keeping the mind in good condition.

It is true that in the intervening years the purpose has shifted from the necessity of one of food-getting to that of pleasure, but in all kinds of temperate climate walking has continued its attractive fitness and health value.

The project of organizing a walking society is in its infancy, and it is not yet in a position to attract the attention of the public. It is a simple, yet a most effective, means of keeping the body in good condition, and it is a most effective means of keeping the mind in good condition.

ARISTOCRATS, BUT REAL SOLDIERS, THESE BOYS OF BATTERY A

Here we see "Dono" Minot and "Freddy" Huntington, both sergeants, who have been through all stages of soldiering.

Back from the border and awaiting mustering out, the members of Battery A showed that Uncle Sam, when in need, can get genuine fighting material from the ranks of the social set.

BATTERY A ARISTOCRATS ARE MANICURING HORSES

Back from the border now for five days, with their hour of martial pomp and glory temporarily over, the silk-stockinged members of Battery A, many of them Harvard graduates or students with ample bank accounts and social standing, were doing the work of stable hands, janitors and scrub-women at the army in Allston yesterday.

While the boys of the "Dandy Fifth" were marching to the plaudits of the multitude, some of the blue-bloods of Battery were on their hands and knees scrubbing floors and ceilings, others were polishing harnesses, others were officiating as chambermaids in the congenial task of splashing around in a tub of suds, while others were scrubbing the floors of the barracks.

Five of them were hard at work painting the keys until a late hour, grinding out musty ralls, pay rolls, field and nation returns and other stenographic matter. So much work has piled up before the discharge that several of them will be on duty today.

Newbury street, Back Bay. He is first sergeant, which means something, for he is the one who assigns the others to the tasks they must undertake on "fatigue" duty.

For instance, if he thinks George Perry, the "strong man" at Harvard last year, would look at home in his bare feet, splashing around in a tub of suds and water, scrubbing vigorously at haversack, well, George has to do it.

George was doing it yesterday—right energetically, too. But he wasn't alone. There were a few other aristocrats sharing his labors. George M. Parker, a tackle on the Harvard varsity squad at Harvard, may prefer the muck and mire of the mud, but his bare toes were paddling around yesterday, as instead, he removed dirt from haversacks by vigorous scrubbing.

While the boys of the "Dandy Fifth" were marching to the plaudits of the multitude, some of the blue-bloods of Battery were on their hands and knees scrubbing floors and ceilings, others were polishing harnesses, others were officiating as chambermaids in the congenial task of splashing around in a tub of suds, while others were scrubbing the floors of the barracks.

Wearing the honorable badge of service—a member of Battery A in the collar.

For his leaving the militia in which he had served thirty-one years.

One of the chief charges against him was that he devoted too much time to availability and too little to his command during the tour on the Mexican border. There were other complaints, "condemned" in the opinion of the chief of staff, that Colonel Graves was not a fighter, that he was not a leader, that he was not a soldier.

The case against Colonel Graves, however, was not a simple one. It was a case of a man who had been in the militia for thirty-one years, who had been a member of Battery A in the collar, who had been a member of Battery A in the collar, who had been a member of Battery A in the collar.

Rhode Island's Troops Are Back

Providence, R. I., Oct. 21.—Enthusiasm was outdone in the tribute paid the home-coming guardsmen today. Six former governors marched as a guard of honor to John S. Holbrook, head of the civic division.

Former governor H. Russell Brown, Charles Warren Lippitt, Charles Dean Kimball, Lucius F. C. Garvin, James H. Higgins and Aaron J. Paulier were given a great demonstration as they passed in line.

The "Brown" boys were dressed as representing American revolution times, receiving a shower of applause.

Battery A, field artillery, minus mounts, were cheered for their performance in turning out and making the day an epoch in the history of the State. It was at first decided not to make an effort to participate, as members of the battery felt they were unqualified to marching movements.

MEMBERS OF FIFTH REGIMENT SLEEP IN REAL BEDS AGAIN

All But a Few Permitted to Return to Their Homes to Spend First Night.

There were not as many soldiers as our regular men in our companies. But the great majority were new. They accepted hard and good alike and cheerfully. The majority return in splendid physical condition. There is hardly a man who has not benefited physically by his tour of duty and the general health of the men is far better than when they left.

"We had not a bit of trouble from the old men of our companies. I did not have a bit of use for a guardhouse until the recruits began to arrive. And even among these there were but few who were undesirable. We are all glad, of course, to get back and pleased at the reception accorded us."

The Fifth will still remain for some time in the Federal service. At all of the companies the men were instructed to report every morning at 8:30 o'clock, in uniform with further notice, commencing Monday.

NEW DETAILS EACH DAY.

There will be details selected each day to go through the equipment, and all military property belonging to the government will be turned over to it.

$25,000 to Kill Rats in Boston

The board of health of the city of Boston has voted to expend $25,000 for the purpose of exterminating rats. The money will be expended in the form of contracts for the extermination of rats in the city. The board of health has also voted to expend $10,000 for the purpose of exterminating rats in the city.

It is a relief to see that the city of Boston is taking such effective measures to exterminate rats. The board of health has also voted to expend $10,000 for the purpose of exterminating rats in the city.

There are scores of men just like these in Battery A. They added to the military renown of Massachusetts while they were in service on the border.

Company D of Wolcott, Captain Frederick C. Ryan, Company E of Medford, Captain Robert M. May and Company F of Malden, Captain C. David Berg.

WELCOMED BY ALL.

When turned out on a march to greet the soldiers. The High School battalion, Mechanics' Phoenix and Spanish War Veterans and bands of the municipalities headed the homecoming procession.

Requests were made for the new future, and Massachusetts will continue the tradition which she happily started on the initial return of the boys.

By one o'clock in the afternoon the happiest part of the day came for many of the men. Those who were not needed for detail work were allowed to go to their homes.

But those less fortunate were forced to stay behind and stand guard over the trucks full of goods which came from the front.

WELCOMED BY ALL.

When turned out on a march to greet the soldiers. The High School battalion, Mechanics' Phoenix and Spanish War Veterans and bands of the municipalities headed the homecoming procession.

Requests were made for the new future, and Massachusetts will continue the tradition which she happily started on the initial return of the boys.

By one o'clock in the afternoon the happiest part of the day came for many of the men. Those who were not needed for detail work were allowed to go to their homes.

But those less fortunate were forced to stay behind and stand guard over the trucks full of goods which came from the front.

AEOLIAN PLAYER PIANO

COME to Steinert's tomorrow and see these beautiful Aeolian Player Pianos which you may secure with such very moderate outlay. The Aeolian Player Piano is one of the real triumphs in musical instrument-making. Delightful tone, quick and perfect action—excellence in every essential distinguish these instruments as pianos of highest quality. The cases are fine figured mahogany, beautifully finished.

The player actions are 88-note—full scale. They have special patented expression devices exclusive with instruments of this manufacture. And they have the basic perfection of design and precision of construction that only long instrument building experience can produce.

For sound musical quality the Aeolian Player is equalled by few players of other makes, regardless of price.

The Aeolian Player Piano, remember, is made throughout by the Aeolian Company and sold in New England only at the Steinert Stores. Most important of all, it carries the Steinert guarantee—the soundest assurance of quality you could receive on any musical instrument.

ALCOHOL
SOLUTION

Approach of Winter Months Demands Attention Be Paid to Circulation System.

Many Solutions Are Used to Prevent Freezing of Water and Injury to the Motor.

By J. C. KERRISON.

There is every indication of the growing popularity of the enclosed type of car. All of the manufacturers are producing models of this character, while many others are bringing out an adjustable top which can be applied to the touring car, making it of the sedan or enclosed type. This is indicative of a gradual change of the motor car in the winter months than in any previous year, and as indications bring to mind the fact that there are many things to be considered in connection with winter touring, which are entirely forgotten during the pleasant warmer months of the year, and none the less of them, the matter of the freezing up of the water circulation and the comfort of the passengers.

The latter is something which requires no great amount of attention, but the former, while no more important, is equally more difficult, owing to the sudden change in the temperature, characteristic of New England.

Detachable tops for both touring cars and runabouts have been developed to a greater degree this year, and are today as well constructed and finely attached that the motorist has no hesitancy in using the car, particularly if he feels that it is for good and sufficient reasons to maintain two kinds of vehicle throughout the year.

The accessory people have come to the fore with quite a number of little attachments that mean much to the comfort of the winter motorist. These include foot warmers, car radiators, and other little nick-nacks, contributing to their personal comfort.

The one thing that seems to possess the greatest difficulty for the lay motorist is the selection of a suitable non-freezing fluid to be used in the cooling system of the motor.

A great number of users find it inconvenient to heat their garages and therefore, must necessarily be careful to provide the use of satisfactory non-freezing fluids. There are many ways of protecting the radiating system from freezing, such, for instance, as enclosing the hood of the car in heavy blankets, the dropping of a curtain over the radiator, but the opinion of those who ought to know this is by no means sufficient to prevent the freezing of water and may result in the opening up of the radiator and the cracking of a cylinder, both of which are decidedly expensive as well as annoying.

When a car is to be used in any considerable extent in the winter, it is certainly best to use a non-freezing solution. Alcohol has been generally conceded as the best known freezing solution, as it will not in the least injure any of the vital parts of the water system. It will, of course, in time cause more or less deterioration of the rubber hose connection between the radiator and the motor, but it will not do so to as great an extent as will glycerine or calcium chloride, both of which have a detrimental effect upon the radiator and the motor. Glycerine has a disintegrating effect upon rubber and decomposes at high temperature, while the calcium chloride sets up an electrolytic action on metal, and if impure has a corroding effect.

The use of a proper proportion of calcium chloride, glycerine and alcohol will cause a scale deposit in the water system of a car, and in many instances clogging up the system, making great trouble and expense. Furthermore, this mixture is expensive. The price of calcium chloride and glycerine is high and both of them must be chemically pure.

As to a mixture of glycerine and alcohol, this has a very disagreeable odor, the advice of members in the business they would use alcohol in preference to all other solutions.

There is a choice between wood alcohol and denatured alcohol. Less of the former is required, a fairly per-

Even a child can tell the difference between an old car and a new, in spite of the fact that the paint on the old car may be brand new, while the new car may be soiled. Just how they can tell, it is quite probable they would be unable to say, as it is merely the general effect which is impressed upon their minds.

In the same way that the rings around a tree tell the age of the tree, the changes in the design of the car tell the age of the car.

Death Lays the Pavement

THE pavement in this picture reaches back hundreds of centuries beyond the beginning of human history.

Every block in the pavement is a human head, a human life. Always Peace, emblem of civilization's hope, never yet attained, has walked forward, seeking a permanent resting place—with Death and blood ahead and beneath her feet.

As monuments are built upon the rock, so human progress has always been built on suffering and death.

The great French Republic that followed the French Revolution is built upon ground soaked with blood.

The freedom of slaves was bought in this country with lives untold and thousands of millions of money.

Every little privilege wrested from brutal power by the oppressed majority has been written in blood and sacrifice.

A long, dreary, red road is the path that human civilization has travelled from the dark days of the beginning up to this day.

Human heads are the paving stones, human blood is the sticky asphalt poured between the stones.

Brutality, autocracy, militarism are the forces that have pounded them into place.

This crouching figure of Death was at work with her paving one hundred thousand years ago. And the only change is in the names on the paving blocks and the weapons with which life is taken.

Twenty-three hundred years ago it was Alexander with his Greeks slaughtering Asiatics.

And two thousand years ago Caesar with his Romans killing the Gauls and dragging the noblest of them in chains to die in a Roman dungeon.

To-day the pavement of death is made with the heads, the lives and blood of practically all the peoples of the world.

German, French, Italian, Russian, English, Austrian, Hungarian, Bulgarian, Serbian, Roumanian, Egyptian, Asiatic and African blood—all are mixed together in the cement that holds fast the horrible pavement.

But it IS a pavement. And in the thousands of centuries that are to come, the years in which men will live on this earth as CIVILIZED BEINGS, the paving done to-day in death and murder will be a great highway of peace, prosperity and human happiness, and Peace will walk on that road, all the paving done and the murdering ended.

The longest road comes to an end. And the period of international murder among human beings will come to an end. He is a poor citizen of this planet who does not BELIEVE it and preach his belief.

The pavement of Death is nearly finished. The road is nearly all laid, and whoever will may convince himself of it.

This is the most horrible of all the wars in the world's history—as regards wholesale killing of FIGHTING MEN.

But it is the best of wars in the world's history as regards the killing of WOMEN and of CHILDREN.

For a Thousand Centuries This Paving Has Gone On. Block by Block, Death Has Laid the Stones—Every One a Human Life.

But Always PEACE Has Walked Behind. And Some Day, Hard as It May Be to Believe It, Peace Will Walk AHEAD, and Death's War Pavement Will Be Finished.

Men have been murdered as never before. The women and the children have been spared as never before.

Men at every stage have fought with every new weapon acquired. They fought once with the bones of animals, and with sharp stones fastened to clubs.

Then with spears and bows and arrows.

They fight now with dynamite, flying machines and submarines.

They have gone through the whole gamut.

The most hopeful sign is this: Formerly men fought and somebody conquered. Now they realize that, fight as they may, NOBODY can conquer.

The nation that was a prosperous republic, no matter how the war may end, will find itself a poor republic after this war.

The nation that was a brutal autocracy, with all the power in the hand of one man, will find itself, no matter how this war may end, a suffering, impoverished country.

Tens of billions have been and will be spent, millions of lives sacrificed, a hundred years of human life on this planet wasted.

And every human being, nation and interest concerned in the war will be the loser, no matter what the end.

War to-day means millions of lives lost, instead of hundreds of thousands.

It means thousands of millions of dollars spent by each country, instead of the old fashioned, relatively small amount.

It means that EVERY nation involved must come out a loser, and that no one can be victor when the score is settled.

This war makes the people of the world realize that they may murder each other, squander the savings, financial, intellectual and artistic, of centuries—but not one can be the gainer.

Each new invention of the human brain has made war more deadly and discouraged the warriors.

When the great man could ride out in his suit of steel armor and gallop over the bodies of the miserable peasants, uninjured by their spears and arrows, war was profitable and the rich enjoyed it.

When the lead bullet, with powder behind it, came, penetrating the breastplate, war became unfashionable, and the kings and the rich remained far from it.

Human ingenuity now has made war not only dangerous, deadly and exhausting, but impossible as regards any definite conclusion.

When this war is over—and may it end soon—there will be earnest thinking done before any nation goes to war again, and before the combined nations PERMIT any nation to go to war.

War once meant glory for an individual or a nation, high honor, wealth, new territory.

Now it means dull, discouraging, slow, desperate fighting and murder. It means bankruptcy, exhaustion, despair.

Old Death is weary with laying the pavement of human lives!

Peace marches on, confident, hopeful; and in the end to be triumphant.

BELIEVE this, and spread your belief. When you think of the war, think not only of the harm that it has done, but of the lessons that it has taught.

From the despot on his throne to the peasant waiting for his death in the trenches, every man knows to-day that WAR DOES NOT PAY.

War has paid hitherto. And those that made war successfully at its end rode triumphant, richer and more powerful, on the Death pavement that you see in this picture.

Now it is all changed; the world has learned the lesson that it had to learn, as children learn when they burn themselves at the fire.

WAR DOES NOT PAY!

It does not pay the autocrat at whose command war starts. It does not pay the selfish commercial interests whose cunning and scheming make it possible for the autocrat to unite his subjects under a banner of false patriotism.

WAR DOES NOT PAY ANY LONGER. The whole world knows it. And war is nearing its end—BELIEVE IT.

A few more thousands, perhaps millions, of blocks must be laid, each the head of a dead man. Then this pavement will be finished, Peace will have ended her long walk and found a permanent resting place on the earth.

MRS. N. R. V.—That's the way. One actually gets wrinkles trying to get rid of them by using the useless wrinkle cream—over these days. My face is wrinkled from them all for once. I'll use them till I'll prove you that, because your dream of a beautiful, glowing complexion is just what you do. I say, Thousands have done it, you can do it. It never fails. Stop using all the prepared cosmetics and make-up. They will only make you worse. Make your own this way, in a few moments. Mix one ounce of zincine and two tablespoonfuls of water. Rub the white of water all over your face. It's simple and wonderful. Every spot will vanish and your complexion will be perfect. Dissolve a teaspoonful of ergol in a cup of water and use as a headwash and you'll see how different your hair will be. All the itching, itching dandruff will disappear like magic. You'll never use anything else. Enough ergol can be obtained from the drug store at the drug store for over a dozen of these shampons.

"It Makes Hair Grow Inches a Month"

As the October weeks go on, more and more are the town houses of the fashionable world being opened. The dread of infantile paralysis has served to keep families with young people longer at their summer and country places than usual, but the cold weather made it seem less a danger to come back to town and put the children at the schools which had such belated openings.

Weddings which have made so large a part of the excitement for the two previous months in the preparations for them and the happenings, are fast giving way to the debutantes. From now on they will take first place in preparations and interest until after the New Year at least. One hears little else at the smart modistes but talk of the fascinating creations being made for these new, young and eager aspirants for social honors. As in New York, the Boston number is larger this year than for several seasons past, which means that entertainments will be numerous and more brilliant.

After a comparatively dull in the announcements of engagements, last week came that of Miss Deacon and Mr. Gray. Miss Deacon has a large cosmopolitan and trans-Atlantic circle of friends and in Boston for several seasons past she has also been a prominent figure. Miss Denny and Dr. Jack's engagement, announced earlier, has a more local interest.

The first debutante to be presented during November, which is fast filling up with such events, will be Miss Perkins, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Perkins of Jamaica Plain, for whom her grandmother, Mrs. Ward, is giving a tea the first day of the month at the Jamaica Plain home. The same week on Friday Gorton will be the scene of the next presentation, that of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence's daughter, at a small dance.

MISS DENNY AND DR. JACK ENGAGED

THE engagement of Miss Mary G. Denny and Dr. Edwin Jack is one of the sweetest and most interesting. Miss Denny and her older sister, Miss Emily Denny, make their home on Upland road in Brookline. Another sister is Mrs. Joslin, the wife of Dr. Elliott Joslin of Bay State road. Dr. Francis P. Denny, who married Miss Martha Storow and who lives in Brookline, is a brother. Mr. John W. Denny and Mr. Clarence H. Denny of the Somerset Club are uncles. Among the cousins are Mr. Clarence B. Denny, who married Miss Tilden, and Miss Mary DeForest Denny of Milton and Gordon Hutchins of Concord, whose wife was Alice Howler. Mrs. Charles L. Hutchins of Concord is an aunt.

MISS POPE AN ATTRACTIVE BRIDE

TRINITY CHURCH in Concord was very prettily decorated with Easter lilies and greenery for the wedding on Tuesday of Miss Margaret Winslow Pope and Mr. Gardner Sparhawk Marion. The ceremony, which was performed at 12.30 by the Rev. Smith Owen Dexter, was witnessed by the relatives only.

The bride, who was given away by her father, Mr. Benjamin Pope, was in white tulle and silver, the veil attached to a point lace, worn by the bride's mother on her wedding day. Instead of the usual bouquet, a white prayer book with a tulle cover and a white orchid was carried.

Mrs. Pope, who was her daughter's only attendant, was in beaded tulle and carried a white orchid. The groom's best man was Mr. Edgar Cottle, who was the best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Francis H. Stone of Weston, Henry Endicott, Jr., and Edward Sears of Boston, and Edward M. Chase of Concord. For the reception at 2 o'clock, the Pope estate, which was also continued to the relatives, the house was bright with Killarney roses and Easter lilies with ferns. Mr. and Mrs. Marion, who left for a motor trip of several weeks, will make their home in Concord.

FIVE Greater Boston brides-to-be, whose weddings are of social importance, are the Miss Elizabeth Burrage of Commonwealth House; Louise Chilton and Grace H. Clark Harris, daughters of the late Governor and Mrs. Robert O. Benson; Vera Waterhouse of Newton Highlands; and Constance Jarvis of Mount Hill avenue, Weymouth.

Miss Burrage is engaged to the young uncle of the United Church all marry. Her betrothal is celebrated on November 10 at the home of her father, Mr. John Burrage, 141 Woodland street, Boston.

Miss Harris is engaged to the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Harris, 141 Woodland street, Boston. Her betrothal is celebrated on November 10 at the home of her father, Mr. John Harris, 141 Woodland street, Boston.

Suffragists to Celebrate on Oct. 30

THU. The National Equal Suffrage Association, for equal government for women, is in operation at Mrs. A. J. White's Women's Suffrage Association, 1001 E. 12th St. A National Equal Suffrage Association conference was held at the Federal amendment day. A big meeting was held in Ford Hall, with Mrs. S. J. McGinnis of Canada, Mr. Francis H. Morgan, Democratic nominee for Congress from the Eleventh District; Mr. Daniel A. White, Socialist party candidate for Governor; Mr. Charles K. Burbank, Republican supervisor of administration, and others.

are most suffragists in Canada and is one of the most brilliant workers in the cause of the woman's vote. She has been successful in credit to her organization of suffragists in all of the four provinces, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, all of which have granted equal suffrage during the past year. She has been indefatigable in her organization of suffragists, in her appeals to public sentiment and in her constant pressure upon the provincial Legislatures, and as a result she has impressed suffrage indelibly into Canadian politics. Mrs. McClung organized the Pa-which became the Political Educational League after the franchise was won. With the two-fold object of education and legislation in view, the Political Educational League is now deep in a campaign for better laws for women and children in West Canada. It has attracted attention to the present unsatisfactory laws concerning inheritance, dower and guardianship.

“O Uncle Tom, ain’t it awful!” wailed Mrs. Collins, as she lugged into the little sleeping room where Timothy Phelps lay dying.

“What?”—“That doctor—ye—ye—ye,” replied the old man, huskily.

“Oh, ye mean that I sarter die?”

Mrs. Collins nodded, apparently too overcome to speak. Uncle Tom’s other relatives looked on with his displeasure and wished they could weep as easily.

“O, it ain’t so awful as ye might think, Jane. It would be worse if I had to live a longer term. When a man’s ninety-seven it’s time.”

Mrs. Collins wept audibly, and, not to be outdone, Mrs. Macomber and Miss Giddens joined in the wailing.

“The only thing that’s awful is the way you wimmin carry on,” complained the old man, feebly. “Where’s Bill?”

“I don’t know,” snarped Mrs. Collins, with meaning, “I should think he’d have enough to do around here.”

“Bill?” otherwise William Phelps, stepped softly into the room.

“Thought you had enough audience, Uncle Tom. If there’s anything I can do—”

“You might be with your own uncle when he breathes his last!” snarped Mrs. Collins.

“I will when I’m asked,” replied the nephew, starting to back out of the room.

“You, Bill, ye young devil!”—Bill was forty—“hol on a minute, then ye’ll run along. I ye got all’er now, ye’ve durn relative, and I want to let ye run so to tearin’ up this house, ‘cuse you won’t find any hidden will. I ain’t made none, and I ain’t hid no money in no ‘tise’ none.”

“All of ye ain’t thought of nothin’ else for years,” said the dying

nan. "Sell the place and divide it equally among ye, will ye?"

They all nodded.

"Good. I will see whether the matter is more peaceful, ye. I have just married, I have a new furniture. Mary is a new maid, I have a new way with a deep carpet, I have the dishes. Father, ye believe that I have a new belonging to ye, I can't find it when Father was killed at Malvern Hill." He cleared it. "Ye are all having the phonygraph, it is not mine, it is my own, I can't find it, I know ye need to hear him. No all of ye say 'way and I have a little comfort drivin', can't ye?"

"Oh, for the love of God, ye need to hear him," said Uncle Tom.

"Stop!" snarled the old man, "stop!"

But it was Uncle Tom who stopped.

Half an hour later Mrs. Macomber, having sent Bill over to the village for the undertaker, was secretly examining the gup and phonygraph. She thought there might be money hidden in them, but was disappointed. After the piers, Bill came back to the little house to get the gup. He always had a key to it, and he took it all the time.

"Will ye, stop that phonygraph?" he asked of his twelve-year-old son.

"Kiss I use it, Paw," gasped the delighted youngster.

"Get yer little hand, and stand up here and take ye some!"

The three now examined and admired the gup. They had no complaint to make, for the things Uncle Tom had given them were worth while, and he had used good judgment in giving. There were more important things to be had, but these, under prospective purchasers with money were coming to look over Uncle Tom's little farm.

BOSTON THEATRE

The greatest laughter frolic of the year, the Charlie Chaplin Revue of 1916, in five parts, and shown exclusively for the first time in Boston at the Boston Theatre this week, heads a splendid bill of high-class first-time pictures and splendid vaudeville attractions offered at this playhouse.

The Revue of 1916 is based upon three of Chaplin's greatest comedy successes, "The Tramp," "His New Job," and "A Night Out." The piece starts with Charlie Chaplin as "The Tramp." He is out of work and leaves the city to wander along the country roads. He rescues a girl from the hands of a gang of hoboes, who are trying to rob her, and is given work on her father's farm.

After the day's toil, Chaplin goes out for a night's frolic, and the net of misadventure he weaves about himself and his companion would turn the acrobatic misanthrope into a sunny-tempered optimist.

"Drat, the Police Reporter," a new detective play, check full of thrills, will also be shown, as well as new chapters of "The Yellow Menace" and the Boston Theatre Topical Weekly.

The big vaudeville bill includes Roger Gray and company in musical comedy moments; Julia Curtis, the clever mimic; Fisher and Rockaway, in a series of clever delineations of the Southern dandy characters, with appropriate songs and stories; Tiarney and Franklin, another lively duo; and dancing turns; Orr and Le Costa, the singer and the composer of "Little Gray Mother" and other successes; Clara and Alwood, the bump-the-bump act, and other offerings.

PARK THEATRE

The Park has arranged to give all this week a double Brady-made bill, the first time in this country, with stars of world-wide reputation.

Headlining the bill is the "Heart Out" in five acts, starring Earl Kane, who lends her talent to the character of the twins. The roles give Earl Kane the best opportunity yet accorded her, and she certainly makes the most of her chance.

The second all-star feature on the bill is the "Hidden Girl," in five acts, which is a story of the struggle of a cabaret singer who has been left with a nameless daughter by the death of the man who wronged her. His final act in beseeching her to home gives her an opportunity to settle in the village where she is unknown and live down her past.

Miss Marguerite Gallagher will be continued for another week, which is her last week of the long engagement at the Park Theatre.

Theda Bara will make her appearance on the screen as Juliet in "Romero and Juliet" at the Modern, week of October 22. In this production Miss Bara is furnished the first part she has had for portraying the young girl whose heart overflows with joy and enthusiasm.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE

faculty of the girl's college provided that the pupils might attend the Boston Symphony Concerts.

"I am a poor theatrical fan," confessed Sir Herbert, "and the point of view of New Englanders is strange to me, but I still esteem it a great favor if some one will explain to me why a Symphony Concert is less conducive to infantile paralysis than a Shakespearean performance, or why a student is more likely to contract the disease in the theatre than in a concert hall. I have written the president of Wellesley asking for a solution of the riddle, but haven't had a reply yet."

The Opera House, which is now operated as a regular theatre with a house staff and complete equipment for playing any kind of attraction, will open its doors tomorrow under the management of Lawrence McCarty.

The Opera House, which has been dark and gloomy as the Pyramid of Cheops for three-quarters of the year since it was built, is booked solid from now until March, which is a pretty good testimonial of what a hustling and efficient manager can do. The Aborns are here for two weeks. The Diaghileff Russian ballet follows them in for a week. The house will then be occupied for five weeks by the Hippodrome show, including Sousa and Charlotte. Next comes the Boston National Grand Opera company for three weeks, and after it the new spectacular production of "Ben Hur."

Soma say that three out of every four plays fail; others put it as high as nine out of ten. Ray Comstock, producer of "Very Good, Eddie," has succeeded in beating that average, for he hasn't had a failure for several years. "Nobody Home," "Experience" and other big successes of several past seasons have earned him distinction. He explains his success in the fact that he owns theatres in Albany and Cleveland, and tries out in those houses every Spring with a first-class stock company pieces that he hopes later to produce on Broadway. "Experience" and "Very Good, Eddie," were tried out in that way.

Cecil Cunningham at B. F. Keith's

Patrons of B. F. Keith's Theatre will receive the surprise of their lives when Miss Cecil Cunningham, undoubtedly one of the handsomest and most talented artists that ever visited this city, will step on the stage and give a song that deals with the political situation in this city and also take playfully at many of the town's shortcomings.

It is the first time in the history of vaudeville in any part of this land that a woman has attempted to incorporate in her act a series of local situations such as Miss Cunningham presents.

The Keith management of the Pal-

In order that the opera shall be opera, Mr. Kromberg proposes to go right down where they live, and let the opera be the National Theatre at the corner of Berkeley and Tremont streets to be the home of the opera.

The National Theatre was originally built in 1854, and as a giant picture house, but it was taken over by the Keith management who still control it. It is a fine building, and any theatre in Boston, even the Boston Opera House. The name of the new company is to be the Boston Civic Opera Company. The price of an opera, or at least opera which is not a play, is one of the things which is so ready to do so.

The project is still in the petition stage, Mr. Kromberg being engaged in getting the signatures of prominent citizens who believe that grand opera ought to be provided for the common people.

Sir Herbert Tree read in the newspaper on the day of his arrival that the students of Wellesley College had been forbidden to attend the theatre in Boston because of the existence in this city of cases of infantile paralysis. But the consistent

The Romance of the Girl Who Always Got What She Wanted.

A Real Queen for a God-mother, a String of Pearls That Dazzled Even Royalty, the Most Wonderful Balls and Parties, and Now---the Love of an Heroic Prince to Crown the Amazing Good Fortune of New England's Richest Heiress

There is a girl who always got what she wanted. Truly, it seems that here is a case where every godmother has broken all records in the class. There is always a fairy hovering round, of course, as in any recent fairy book you find around any little girl and you'll find the fairy bubbling up every two or three chapters—and in real life the lad fairy often has times pretty much her own way. Which makes it all the more remarkable that in the real life case of Margaret Draper the lad fairy almost never got so much as a "look in."

Just by way of a few recent incidents to start off with:

Five years ago, when Margaret Draper was a sixteen years old, she found her- self the richest heiress in New England. There's hardly any doubt that a big fortune was one thing she wanted most of all.

The next thing of importance she wanted was a Prince for a husband. Lord behold! the prince was ready and willing.

Then, presently, the big European war started and while Margaret Draper sewed shirts for soldiers—in company with so many other girls, both rich and poor—she discovered that she wanted to marry a hero!

Right here is where Good Fairy Godmother waved her wand, with results which the most optimistic and believing of goddaughters could hardly have anticipated. She changed that selfsame prince into a war hero!

How many hated Austrians this prince whose hereditary designation is Prince Andrea Boncompagni—killed while fighting with the Italian army is a detail that has not been made public. However, it is enough that he has been proclaimed a hero. That's what Margaret Draper wanted, and, as usual, she got it.

At present there is no evidence that he has thought of anything else she wants except a perfectly ideal wedding. There is apparently the slightest reason why she should entertain the small set meetings on this account, for the engagement has been announced in Washington, New York and Boston society—where the Drapers have always been strongly entrenched—looks forward to the glad event with enthusiasm, and no one doubts that the Prince Godmother's wand will perform its customary service.

Ever since General William F. Draper, an old-millionaire and diplomatist high in the councils of the McKinley administration, died five years ago leaving a will which bequeathed to his daughter Margaret one half of his great fortune, she has been celebrated as the richest young unmarried heiress in Washington. Under the terms of her father's will, she does not come into absolute control of her six or seven, or eight millions until she is thirty-five years old—two years hence, but that is a matter of small consequence. For, in the meantime, the executors are supposed to see to it that she doesn't miss anything she happens to want which money can provide.

It has always been that way with Margaret Draper, from the cradle onward. From babyhood on, if her God Fairy ever was able to place a wishful rose leaf where it would be calculated to disturb her slumbers, her Good Fairy invariably discovered and removed it in time. As an infant, she was showered with toys of the most enchanting and costly description. When she reached the doll period it was found that her mothering instinct was so strong that she refused to play with dolls, and instead to fill her room with miniature furniture and other things of the kind.

And when it came to parties, the greatest delight of little girls, Margaret Draper's God Fairy indulged her to the limit. Whenever she wanted a party, presto! a party was provided. Maybe that profusion of social functions during the period of childhood and early adolescence accounts for Margaret Draper's distinguished social success as a "grown-up" for that is something of an amount of worldly goods and social bank can buy.

Naturally, the Margaret Draper increased in splendor as she advanced into womanhood and was introduced to the proper social circles. This official introduction was a real event, for Draper wealth had the estimable background of "family." The old Massachusetts home of General Draper at Hopkinton was a sort of family headquarters for a line whose fortune and influence are part of the country's history. Thus the Drapers held a position in New York society as solid as that in their native Boston circle.

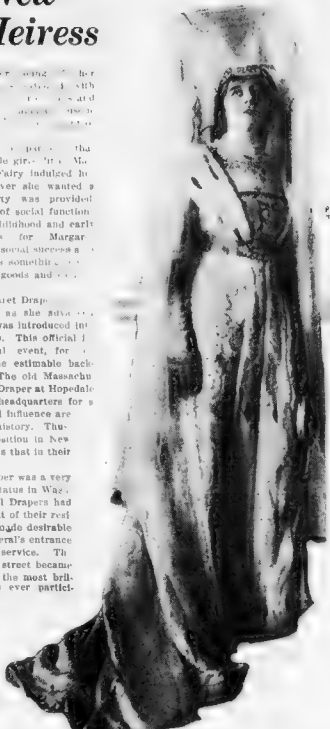

When Margaret Draper was a very little girl high social status in Washington for the General Drapers had developed naturally out of their residence in the capital, made desirable by the fact of the General's entrance into the diplomatic service. The Draper mansion on K street became the scene of some of the most brilliant social occasions ever participated in by Washington society.

The greater part of Margaret's childhood was spent in Italy, to which country General Draper was sent as Ambassador during the first years of his administration. She was born in Rome. To that fact she was her Christian name. Did she discover that she wanted the Dowager Queen Margherita of Italy for a godmother? At any rate, that is what happened. And the christening of Miss Margaret's famous pearl necklace, said to be priceless, was the single fine pearl presented to her by Queen Margherita. Year after year her parents, who were sworn into the necklace reached the present almost regal proportions.

Whenever Ambassador Draper had occasion to return to the capital of his own country he brought his little daughter with him. It was evidently her social future he had in mind when he purchased the present Draper mansion on K street and made it the family's permanent home. It was formerly the Chinese Legation, and is noted as being one of the largest and roomiest private houses in the capital. One of these was her close friend, Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the then President Taft; Katherine Elkins, Isabel May, Constance Hoyt and Yvonne Townsend.

Of course, the thing that Miss Margaret wanted most just then was a unique coming out party, something that would do credit to her and her family. She got it. It took her family a good deal of time and money, but a great deal of expense. In the grand ballroom, which fitted among the daisies and rarest of flowers was created. Among the flowers fitted her humming birds, brought from Florida for the occasion.

Over across the continued floor, she brought butterflies with wings of varied hues, which flitted among the daisies alighting now and then upon the jeweled masses of the debutante and the young Washington beauties who surrounded her. One of these was her close friend, Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the then President Taft; Katherine Elkins, Isabel May, Constance Hoyt and Yvonne Townsend.

were others. Hardly anybody represents the social scene of Washington official and private circles, where this young girl, the daughter of the richest family in the city, is surrounded with a dozen of marguerites for her social godmother, and she wore the famous pearl necklace. The figure of General and Mrs. Draper had brought home with them from abroad for the women gold button boxes, silk opera bags, round fans and large pink bouquets, bearing the name of the "Society of the New York and Washington", for the men "Society of the New York and Washington".

Why We Can't See Stars by Day

It is a common question, "Why can't we see stars by day?" The answer is, "Because the sun is so bright that it overwhelms the light of the stars." The sun is a star, and it is so much brighter than the other stars that its light is scattered in all directions, filling the sky with a bright glow. This glow is so intense that it masks the light of the other stars, making them invisible to the naked eye. However, if we could see through a five-inch telescope, we could see the stars, even during the day. The luminosity of the stars is so great that it can be seen even through a five-inch telescope, except at night.

The first time I saw a person with a prosthetic arm, I was in a hospital. I was a nurse, and I was looking after a patient who had lost his arm in an accident. He was a young man, and he was very brave. He was sitting up in bed, and he was looking at me. He was smiling, and he was saying, "I'm feeling better today." I was looking at his arm, and I was thinking, "How did he do that?" I was looking at his arm, and I was thinking, "How did he do that?"

It was worth while for him to wait.

Besker's method in raising checks or drafts was to erase the writing or figures on the negotiable paper with acid. With specially prepared paper pulp he filled up all perforations in the check or draft and then ironed it so that the changes could not be detected even under the most powerful glass. He was able to imitate water marks and reproduce the most intricate lithographic designs.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women. Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishments are at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York, and No. 1400 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

FORTUNATE are you if your purse can compass the long fur coat that is to be the reigning note of the approaching Winter. If your purse is not elastic be smart and content in a coat on the same full and generous lines made of cloth and trimmed with fur.

On this page you see two types of long fur coats that will wage rival claims for favor. Both reach the hem of the gown they cover. Both are very full. Both have a band of fur about the hem of the coat. Both display the new and prevailing note of buttons made of ivory. Both have sleeves that are full and wide at the wrist. Both are worn by reason of the contrasting fur with which they are adorned. One marked difference is in the matter of belts. One garment hangs loose and free of any restriction at the waist. The other has a drooping girdle of the same fur as the garment, which is handsome and never becoming to the round figure than if it were of the contrasting fur. In the fur trimming. The woman who is slender but not tall will be grateful for this thoughtful concession by the designer. Short or plump women dislike being "cut off." In other words, they are reluctant to lose a jot or tittle of their apparent height.

I choose quite the word I wish to use for a woman's real and apparent height; they greatly differ. The clever woman who is too short for grace or beauty often contrives to hide that defect. Often we hear the exclamation, "I thought you were much taller than you are until I saw you." That is an unconscious tribute to a woman's art in dress. Also, perhaps, an acknowledgment that she is a mistress of the art of walking and standing well.

The shoulder cape, a memory of our mother's and grandmother's time, will be revived. One of the photographs on this page shows it in all its promise of midwinter warmth. Reaching to below the waist, of curving outline and high collar, the example on this page is an index of what we may expect to see when Winter winds blow cold. They seem to be copies in the large of the long, rounded collar that met general favor last Summer.

Hats will be velvet, velvet, velvet! They will rely largely upon their shape for smart effects, for they will not be elaborately trimmed. A universally becoming shape will be of broad brim, wider at the sides than in front and at the back. It will be worn sharply tilted at the side and adorned by a single spray of straightened plumes. Black velvet promises to be the favorite, but colored velvets will have greater vogue than they have had for a decade.

The aldered crown will be conspicuous. It will be seen with either broad-brimmed or narrow-brimmed hats. The close-fitting Puritan bonnet shown on this page, and so becoming to a youthfully pretty face, has a full crown, with a band of plush of the same shade. A fast pair of gold roses adds chic to the hat.
